New York, New York, November 15, 2011 – Performa pleased to announce The Malcolm Award in honor of the late artist and visionary Malcolm McLaren. Following in the spirit of McLaren, a champion of the young and bold, the prize will be awarded each Performa biennial to an artist aged forty years or younger who demonstrates the most innovative and thought-provoking performance during the biennial. The inaugural award for Performa 11 (November 1–21, 2011) will be presented on November 21st during the Performa Grand Finale at the Bowery Hotel. A cash prize of $10,000 along with an award created by designer Marc Newson will be presented by writer Greil Marcus and musician Lou Reed.

In 2009, Performa and McLaren planned to produce a collaborative live performance lecture as a highlight of the Performa 09 biennial, but sadly this was not to be. For Performa 11, the recipient will be selected by a panel of judges including art critic Claire Bishop, curator Jay Sanders, and McLaren’s long-time creative and life partner, Young Kim.

The evening will also feature screenings of McLaren's artwork Paris: Capital of the XXIst Century (2010) and Shallow 1-21 (2008), as well as music by Spencer Product and Performa 11 artists iona rozeal brown and Jace Clayton.

"After three extraordinary weeks of innovative and original performances, I could not think of a better way to celebrate the closing of the biennial than with the inauguration of The Malcolm Award," says RoseLee Goldberg, Performa Founding Director and Curator says. "The evening recognizes Malcolm McLaren's remarkable life and work, and his ongoing influence on musicians and artists everywhere."

Performa curator Mark Beasley states, "A consummate entertainer, no moment spent with Malcolm was anything less than to be presented with glimpses of a possible fantastic future. The court of McLaren was never mawkish or sentimental. His last proposed lecture presentation with Performa, sadly thwarted through illness, was titled Jesus Christ is a Sausage. It suggested no let up in his caustic wit."

Young Kim adds, "There has been on-going confusion on who and what Malcolm McLaren was, but in fact, Malcolm McLaren was an artist in the purest sense of the word. He heralded the new generation of artists today by showing that an artist can work in any medium without boundaries, not just in traditional painting and sculpture. He would be thrilled with this award and I am thrilled for him."

Malcolm McLaren (English, b. 1946 London, England; d. Switzerland, 2010) was a visionary of pop culture and a pop cultural icon. An artist in the most post-modern sense of the word, time and time again, he was at the forefront. Starting as a young student in London's art schools including Goldsmiths Art College and St. Martin's, he studied drawing and painting before experimenting in radical, politicized artworks inspired by the Internationale Situationniste, the most famous of which was Punk. All his various life-long activities—as legendary shop conceptualist (Let It Rock, Too Fast To Live Too Young to Die, Sex, Seditonaries, World's End and Nostalgia of Mud), his 12-year design partnership with Vivienne Westwood, pop music group creator and manager (Sex Pistols, Bow Wow Wow), singer/composer (Duck Rock, Fans, Waltz Darling, Paris), lecturer, performer, producer, filmmaker, director, philosopher, politician (running for Mayor of London in 1999) and of course his art films, Shallow 1-21 and Paris, Capital of the XXIst Century were expressions of his art.
